What's going on with Egypt & France's green hydrogen & ammonia project?

Facebook/Egyptian Prime Minister's Office RIYADH: Egypt and France have signed a EUR7 billion ($7.6 billion) agreement to develop a large-scale green hydrogen and ammonia production complex near Ras Shokeir on the Red Sea coast.

Why is Egypt launching a green energy initiative?

El-Wazir added that the initiative will also support the localization of green energy components, including electrolyzers, solar panels, and wind turbines. This undertaking strengthens Egypt's position in the global renewable energy landscape and contributes to the country's transition toward a green economy, El-Wazir explained.

What drives Egypt's energy sector?

Oil and natural gas have long been the primary drivers in Egypt's energy sector, experiencing substantial growth since 2015 on the back of major gas discoveries in the Mediterranean. As of FY 2022/23, Egypt's reserves were estimated at 23 million barrels of gas condensate and 2.65 trillion cubic feet of natural gas, driving exploration efforts.

How much money is needed to produce green ammonia in Egypt?

The first phase of the project will require EUR2 billion in direct investment and aims to produce 300,000 tonnes of green ammonia per year. EDF Renewables Chairwoman Beatrice Buffon and Zero Waste Chairman Amr El-Sawaf signed the agreement alongside Egyptian energy officials.
